General Instructions (Home Theatre System Set Up)

1. When placing your speakers, one of the general rules of thumb to get a better sound is to ensure that your speakers are placed a couple of feet away from the front wall and a similar distance from the side walls (does not apply to in-wall and on-wall speakers).
2. Your center channel speakers should be the first to be placed. Place it either directly above or below your television, centered if possible.
3. Next, your front left and right speakers should be set up forming a slight arc with your center speakers, with exactly the same distance from where you are standing.
4. Ideally, your primary surround speakers should be positioned to the left and right of where you are seated, at a 90 degree angle or at most 110 degree angle, behind.
5. Also note that, too many people sit too far away from their television and speakers. Sit at least 8 to 12 feet away. If you sit too far away, you'll hear too much of the room instead of a well-defined soundstage.
